To reveal things as they are, with as little interference as possible by minimizing distortion caused by the artificiality of artistic media, concepts, processes and ego, allowing direct images created with true, life-size 1:1-scale.

Having developed an experimental programme of floral landscape paintings known as Impressions, as well as a range of photo-based art programmes known as Fauxtography, developing a new program of large format Solargrams of flowers, fruit, trees, and people was a natural progression, and a link between these extensive, and seemingly very different programmes of painted and photo-based work.

These works of camera-less photography were created outdoors with natural flora, fauna, sunlight and water.

The sun as the source of all life manifesting images of living things sustained by sunlight. Not representations of, but rather, traces of living presence.
